Last year, a YouTuber uploaded the world's most entertaining keep-fit video, in which a George Costanza-lookalike with knickers on his head robbed a terrified Japanese woman. Three girls then jumped around a bit, demonstrating the vocabulary you'll need to protect yourself from a geeky gaijin armed with a nail file.

And for the benefit of anyone who enjoyed that first episode, someone's gone to the trouble of collecting every episode of Let's Zuiikin' English!! and uploaded them in one convenient YouTube directory .

No episode can ever be as entertaining as that original, but the quality's maintained through every episode, and it deserves to be released on DVD so we can enjoy it in its full, big-screen glory. Who can resist a language course that includes "hasta la vista baby" in its English curriculum?
